Working from Home

Events over the last several months have caused a profound change in the way many of us view the workplace. Home as a sanctuary has assumed a new meaning, including the ability to effectively engage in business.

At Sligh, it has always been our belief that design and decor play critical roles in how we react to our environment – both physically and emotionally. We firmly believe that there is an art to creating spaces that inspire, enable and encourage our best work.

While some have a dedicated room as a home office, many of us choose to create a work space within another room, including bedrooms, living rooms, dining rooms and even hallways. In the following pages, we offer interior design options for both. Sometimes an intimate space can prove to be the most productive.

With over three-quarters of Americans working at home during the pandemic, it appears that this trend will continue in a significant way, creating new opportunities within the home furnishings category. We invite you to explore the remarkable range of styles and options in our assortment, with the goal of creating an inspiring work space that is uniquely yours.

GREYSTONE

Natural light and a view of nature are welcome attributes in a work space. Note how the petite writing desk offers an intimate and stylish, yet functional work surface with convenient storage. The Octavia file chest, with its decorative drawer fronts, looks more like a residential hall chest than a locking file cabinet.

BARRYMORE

Designs feature distinctive overlay moldings and custom hardware in an antique bronze finish. Pieces are crafted from white oak and wire-brushed to accentuate the grain pattern, and finished in a dark walnut coloration. These designs offer a heavier scale for those looking for a more masculine look.

Cambridge writing desk: 61 x 31
Durango file chest: 50 x 24 x 34H

Richmond hill

Traditional design remains the most popular style category, and Richmond Hill offers classic styling elements like fluted posts, elegant tapered legs and inverted breakfronts designs. Pieces are crafted in cherry veneers with a rich umber finish and gentle burnishing in the corners for a great look in any work space.
